

Board Game Algorithm

In groups, design an algorithm that makes a recommendation on a board game to play given certain user inputs and code it up. You have until the end of class.

The Use Case is this: A group of friends are hanging out, wondering what to do. They enjoy board games, but are tired of playing Monopoly, Life and other common games. They want to try something new. But there are thousands of board games out there. Which one should they try?

To make this algorithm, you have data from Board Game Geek, scraped by this fine fellow and used here. For the sake of this exercise, I've reduced the number of board games and fields available to a manageable 700 games that had been rated more than 2,000 times and had a rating higher than 2. The lowest rated game in the set? Tic Tac Toe. So you've got a lot of games in here.

Your algorithm must take in user input -- you decide what you need to make a good decision based on the data you have -- and output a recommendation for a single board game.

Designate one person to submit code at the end of class, and be sure that all of your names are in the code so you get credit.

The game data is in a Python list, where each row is a list.

The headers are ['id', 'type', 'name', 'yearpublished', 'minplayers', 'maxplayers', 'playingtime', 'minplaytime', 'maxplaytime', 'minage', 'users Rated', 'average_rating']
